The PRIDE Executive Committee also discussed having a meeting to acquaint the public with the need for concern about the trees of Chautauqua. Branton offered to present a program at the meeting.

INDEPENDENCE - Local Army Reservists, members of the 101st Service and Supply Company assisted in the Ralph Mitchell Zoo of Riverside Park by helping park sump. Francis Wells remove much of the old bare pines from the unoccupied sunken area.

The activity was coordinated by the Independence PRIDE Committee and was undertaken by the reservists as a community betterment project.

Cutting torches were used to separate the sections of the pines so they could be hauled out. The Army boys not only provided manpower but trucks and a fork lift to help in the job.

Vice-Chairman - Edward Breaze, Kansas Department of Economic Development
Treasurer - Edwina Fink, Kansas Federated Business and Professional Women's Clubs

Two hundred fifty persons from 59 communities attended seven regional meetings this year. Representatives from many communities that had not enrolled in PRIDE were on hand. Purpose of the meetings was to present information and exchange ideas that would be helpful to leaders in PRIDE.

The regional meetings were sponsored by Kansas Department of Economic Development, Cooperative Extension Service and Kansas Gas and Electric Company.

Plans are underway for similar meetings to be held in more areas of Kansas next November.

YOUTH AWARD PROGRAM

The State PRIDE Committee voted to adopt a youth involvement award program for 1976.

The purpose of the Youth Involvement Award is to recognize communities which have achieved an outstanding degree of meaningful youth participation in the planning and decision-making levels of community-wide improvement efforts, as well as in the actual implementation of improvement projects.

A well-balanced YOUTH AWARD PROGRAM is one that recognizes and demonstrates the importance of the contribution and involvement of youth in the total community effort. Youth participation may take several forms and include, for example, representation on community governing boards, school boards, PRIDE steering committees and parks and recreation boards. Equally important are the contributions of youth in the form of youth-generated community improvement projects and activities such as those undertaken or instigated by councils or a task force of youth, church youth and youth service groups, 4-H, FFA and school classes.

All communities which enter the PRIDE program cash awards competition are automatically considered for this award. No special section on youth involvement in the project book is necessary.

Fifty-five persons from eight states attended the conference. Topics for discussion were organizing for community development, judging, presenting awards, financing programs, giving recognition, and methods for total community development.

Those attending decided to hold another meeting in early 1978.

LOCAL PRIDE ACTIVITIES

Newton - Members of the Newton PRIDE beautification committee told the city commission that they were happy that the community won the state Pecanor award, but there are still some things that must be corrected. County Agricultural Agent Jack Barnes was the spokesman for the group.

They showed slides of some of the well-kept, and some of the deteriorating areas in Newton.

They said the non-tax resources should be used to solve the problem.

However, the committee should highlight the degree of youth participation in the project book. The project book information sheet should also briefly outline the measures of youth participation in the organization, planning, decision-making, and implementation of the year's efforts.

Recognition will consist of an award certificate presented at the Annual Awards Banquet to one community in each population category, providing there is a community deserving that award.

A recommendation was made at the State PRIDE Committee meeting to send a copy of the "Youth Involvement Awards Program" notice to the schools in Kansas for posting on bulletin boards in an effort to get the youth active in the program.

Fifty-three persons from 15 communities attended.

Sedgwick was chosen for a bicentennial city on the basis of the PRIDE mansion project.

Chautauqua - The Executive Committee of PRIDE discussed adopting a bicentennial tree project as its bicentennial project for 1976. The committee met with Jerry Bratton, area extension forester.

Among areas mentioned for planting the bicentennial trees were the library, cemeteries, grade schools and Neosho County Community Junior College.

Sedgwick said that in addition to the bicentennial project, the city of Chautauqua needs to establish a tree board and pass a city tree ordinance which would govern the planting of trees on public owned land.

Bratton said that in addition to the bicentennial project, the city of Chautauqua needs to establish a tree board and pass a city tree ordinance which would govern the planting of trees on public owned land.

Sedgwick said that there was no practical hope for saving the elm trees which are on public property. There is a new chemical treatment available, he said, but the cost is about $70 per year for a 21 inch diameter tree.
